Among the many things we have learned this past year, we reaffirmed that we are stronger together. We faced an unprecedented year of anxiety and upheaval. It was a year marked with increased awareness of the violence and injustice suffered by black and brown Americans alongside the COVID-19 pandemic which disproportionately impacted our students and families. Yet, the Internationals community confronted the academic and social challenges by staying connected and supporting each other throughout the year.

The 2019-2020 school year was punctuated with Internationals coming together to learn, share, and still find reasons to occasionally celebrate. At the start of the 2019-20 school year we celebrated the opening of our third middle school academy in West Contra Costa, CA, expanding our Bay Area network to four programs. Our professional development opportunities brought over 900 Internationals educators from across the country together to share and learn strategies for serving our multilingual students. And when the pandemic suddenly forced us all into remote work, we came together virtually to face the challenges of remote learning and addressing the urgent needs of our students and families.

Through it all, Internationals staff and educators remained steadfast in their work with school communities. With creativity and compassion, Internationals educators ensured students engaged in meaningful learning and received the social emotional support needed to succeed. As one 2020 Internationals Network graduate shared, “Nothing is impossible. It’s important to remember to take chances to achieve your goal, and remember that our teachers are always behind us.”

The past year has shown that our network is indeed stronger together - as well as more creative, more resilient, and more caring. Together we will emerge from this difficult period more committed than ever to transforming education for multilingual learners.

The immigrant and refugee students we serve in our schools and academies are more successful than their district peers, graduating high school and attending colleges in higher numbers. In the 2019-2020 academic school year, 79% of Internationals Network students graduated compared to the National Average of 67% (Low-Income-High Minority). About 70% of Internationals graduates enroll in college, as compared to their peers who graduated from high-poverty schools (29%).

We provide both school-based supports and network-based supports where we gather leaders and school staff to collaborate and engage in professional learning. With schools’ transition to remote learning, Internationals adapted and modified services to address the immediate needs of schools. Internationals converted in-person services to virtual services, developed webinars in place of workshops, and created resource guides for leaders, teachers and student support staff adjusting to remote learning. Furthermore, Internationals provided virtual support to teachers for curriculum and instruction and facilitated virtual gatherings to leverage the expertise and successful practices of our school leaders, teachers and student support staff.

Despite social distancing and school closures, Internationals provided opportunities for school leaders and school staff to collaborate and learn with each other to find solutions to the challenges of remote schooling.

Internationals created spaces for school leaders and school staff to connect and engage with each other so that they could better serve our immigrant and refugee students. Together we collaborated to address the social-emotional needs of the students and their families.

From the start of the pandemic, Internationals Network worked fast to adapt and modify services that addressed our school communities’ immediate needs. We created spaces for school leaders and school staff to come up with solutions to urgent problems, while providing strategies and tools to ensure meaningful learning opportunities for students during the transition to remote learning.

Internationals Network transforms education for immigrant and refugee multilingual learners by helping schools and districts better serve those students. We design new schools and programs within existing schools, coach leaders, teachers, and school staff, and provide access to an invaluable network of support and learning for those who work with us.

Our comprehensive approach works. As leaders, teachers, and school staff tailor their instruction, culture, structure, and leadership to effectively serve this population, the students are far more successful than their counterparts outside of our network—graduating at much higher rates.

Internationals Network’s vision is to ensure that all recent immigrant students who are multilingual learners have access to a quality education that prepares them for college, career and beyond. Our mission is to provide quality public education for recently arrived immigrants by growing and sustaining a strong national network of innovative public schools, while sharing proven best practices and influencing policy for multilingual learners on a national scale.
We provide both school-based supports and network-based supports where we gather leaders and school staff to collaborate and engage in peer learning. With schools’ transition to remote learning, Internationals needed to adapt and modify services to address the immediate needs of schools. Internationals converted in-person services to virtual services, developed webinars in place of workshops, and created resource guides for leaders, teachers and student support staff adjusting to remote learning. Furthermore, Internationals provided virtual support to teachers for curriculum and instruction and facilitated virtual gatherings to leverage the expertise and successful practices of our school leaders, teachers and student support staff.

Through social distancing and school closures, Internationals provided opportunities for school leaders and school staff to collaborate and learn with each other to find solutions to the challenges of remote schooling. We also created opportunities for teachers to meet regularly to discuss best practices for remote learning for working with a heterogeneous, multilingual student population.

Internationals created spaces for school leaders and school staff to connect and engage with each other so that they could better serve our immigrant and refugee students. In turn, with creativity and compassion, Internationals educators and student wellness teams stayed connected with students. Together we collaborated to address the social-emotional needs of the students and their families.

From the start of the pandemic, Internationals Network worked fast to adapt and modify services that addressed our school communities’ immediate needs. We created spaces for school leaders and school staff to come up with solutions to urgent problems, while providing strategies and tools to provide meaningful learning opportunities for students during the transition to remote learning.

+ Professional Development: Newly developed workshops, virtual school visits, and virtual coaching provided Internationals educators with the guidance, strategies and tools to address the unique challenges multilingual learners face in remote learning.

+ Resource Guides: Internationals staff developed online resource guides, available on our website and used by our coaches, that assembled links and guidelines on how to transition to online schooling. Contributors to the guides included Internationals staff, teachers, leaders, and student support staff.

+ Promising Practice Shares: Sessions brought together Internationals teachers from across the network to share and learn promising practices used in classrooms.

+ Annual National Leadership Convenings: School and academy leaders from across our network came together during a series of seven sessions to discuss and address issues related to the challenges faced by school leaders during the Covid-19 pandemic.

+ We convened with counselors & social workers: Meeting biweekly for virtual meetings to share strategies and resources for supporting students during the COVID-19 crisis.

+ Wellness Circles: Internationals provided virtual safe spaces for network staff to reflect on their experiences, acknowledge their own personal resilience and discuss practices for maintaining wellness.

- Remote Collaboration Considerations
+ Research: Many scholars and policy analysts have examined the success of Internationals Network schools and published a variety of reports and peer-reviewed articles to highlight the Network’s effectiveness. From California to central Europe, Internationals Network was the focus of research reports and was highlighted as a best practice.
